Tell Timai Project University of Hawaii

Current Staff

James-HeadshotJames Bennett, Northwest Area Supervisor. James is currently studying for his PhD at Durham University assessing settlement patterns during the Third Intermediate Period and the way in which settlements developed after the New Kingdom. Other research aspects include the development of the Nile Delta and Valley throughout antiquity, hieroglyphic texts, the chronology, and function of terracotta figurines in Egypt, and the nature of human interaction with the landscape in Egypt. James completed his BA in Egyptian Archaeology studying the 30th Dynasty temple complexes in the Delta, and an MA in Egyptology at the University of Liverpool through the study of Persian Ceramics in Egypt. James is the northwestern area supervisor at Tell Timai for the excavation of a large religious and funerary complex and have been excavating there for seven years.
